

Section 6 - Property Listed on the National Register of Historic Places

- NATIONAL REGISTER OF HISTORIC PLACES

Established in 1935 and expanded by the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, the National Register of Historic Places is the Nation's roster of properties important in the history, architectural history, archeology, engineering, and culture of the United States, its states and regions, and its communities. The National Register is maintained by the National Park Service, and expanded through nominations by individuals, organizations, state and local governments and Federal agencies.

The National Register includes buildings and structures such as houses, commercial buildings, and bridges. It also includes sites such as battlefields, parks, and archeological sites. It includes districts - groups of buildings, structures, or sites that make up a coherent whole, such as a neighborhood or an industrial complex. Finally, it includes objects - not portable museum objects, but large movable properties such as fountains and monuments.

The Office of History and Archaeology nominates significant properties to the National Register. Just over 984 Alaskan properties are eligible for or listed in the National Register. The program is a planning tool, because recognition of significant cultural properties encourages their presentation through public awareness.

Attached is the Alaska National Historic Register Determination of Eligibility Properties by United States Geological Survey Quads.
